During the summer can have THE them by ordering it at this office, either in person or by letter.

Secretary of War Lamont has ordered the forty-fifth star to be placed in the field of the union on the army flags. It represents the State of Utah, which will not enter the Union, however, until July 4, 1896.

Ex Gov. Foraker says the paramount issue upon which the battles of both this year and next will be fought will be Cleveland's administration. If this is true the Democrats will welcome the issue with eagerness.—Boston Globe (Dem).

The Indianapolis News thinks that one result of Quay's success will be the withdrawal of ex-President Harrison from the field as a candidate for the Republican presidential nomination.
It says that both Platt and Quay are opposed to him.

The Republicans of Ohio who talk about the scarcity of money in the United States Treasury should look to home. Ohio with a Republican Governor hasn't enough money in her treasury to make an appropriation for representation at the Atlanta fair.

VIRGINIA'S POSSIBILITIES.

The Roanoke Times of recent date contains an interesting article on the subject of "Virginia's Possibilities, and among other things, says:

"The possibilities of the South as a place for home seekers are practically limitless, and the people of this section will be alone to blame if they do not make the most of the opportunities now offered for building it up and bringing it to its proper place in the Union of free and progressive American States. With a climate unsurpassed by any other portion of the globe; with a soil capable of producing everything grown in the temperate zone; with extensive forests, inexhaustible mineral resources, splendid harbors, numerous navigable rivers, and abundant water power; with schools, colleges, churches, and a refined and hospitable people, it only lacks immigration and capital to make it, within the next twenty years, the most prosperous section of this great republic.

"What has been said of the South in general applies to Virginia in particular, as taken all in all, in climate, soil, people, and great undeveloped resources, there is not a fairer land on the globe, or one with greater possibilities."

Our contemporary speaks rightly.
Virginia offers an inviting field not only to home seekers, but to investors of every character. Nowhere in the country are investments safer or the returns greater for the amount invested than in the South, and Virginia is as good as the best.

ONE YEAR OF THE WILSON BILL

The Wilson tariff bill is one year old to-day, the 28th, says the Brooklyn Eagle, and its anniversary is celebrated by one of our contemporaries, which publishes a comparison of the wholesale prices of imported articles now and in 1892, under the McKinley act, the quotations showing a marked reduction in the cost to consumers of most of the articles imported. But this is not the only feature of the anniversary celebration that is worthy of attention, remarks the Eagle, Cheaper necessaries of life have not been obtained at a sacrifice to the dignity or welfare of American labor. Increased wages the country over tell the tale of encouraged industry. Two months ago a list was published of establishments which had voluntarily increased the wages of their employees, and these employees then numbered over 251,000.
Now the figure is nearly doubled.
Failures are comparatively few, and no reductions of wages can be pointed out to offset the gain.

Such is the story of one year of the Wilson bill, and, as our contemporary says, it is a magnificent tribute to the energy of the country when permitted to assert itself under conditions which are not harassing. It is a signal testimonial to the courage and wisdom of a President whose battle for revenue reform is by no means the least conspicuous feature of his career. Safely it may be assumed that the business sentiment of the country will not view with favor any attempt to alter a tariff system under which we are enjoying such great prosperity. The calamity howler has had his day, and those politicians who are anxious to make the tariff the pro-dominant issue in 1896 are not half so confident of results as they were a few months ago."

"WHAT IS MALE ATTIRE?"

A writer in an exchange, who feels some concern less the female woman, commonly referred to as the new woman, may invade the sacred domain of man and appropriate his trousers, is moved to ask the question which heads this article. He cites the fact that from early times in Europe and America, it has been considered "the height of impropriety for the sex to exchange costumes," but is grieved to see that the bloomer and Knickerbocker women bicyclists are now unsexing the question. He views with alarm the encroachments of the new woman. He has seen her appropriate the hat, collar, shirt front and vest, as well as the coat, of the sterner sex, and now, with the hope that the line may be drawn at the trousers, he cries out aloud against the bloomer.

Speaking of the innovation an exchange says that there is a great deal of trouble in the School Board of Toronto, Canada, over the bloomer outbreak. One of its members recently made a motion that the School Inspectors be required to report to the board the names of all the women teachers who ride bicycles "in male attire, commonly called bloomers." He insisted that they were immoral and indecent, and furnished a bad example to the young girls who were attending the public schools, but singular to say the motion was lost upon a vote being taken.

In a number of cities there are ordinances which prohibit the men and women from wearing the garments of the opposite sex and this appears to be the most effectual way to check the advance of the bloomer. However, if the law should hold that the bloomer was invented by a woman for women, "where are we at?"

He Who Hath Loved.

He who hath loved hath borne a vassal's chain And worn the royal purple of a king.
Hath shrunk beneath the joy winter's sting.
Then revelled in the golden summer's reign.
He hath with the dust and ashes lain.
Then soared o'er mountains on an eagle's wing.
A hat hath slept in, worn with wandering,
And hath been lord of castle towers in Spain.
He who hath loved hath starved in beggar's cell.
Then in Aladdin's jeweled chariot driven.
He hath with passion roamed a demon fell.
And had an angel's raiment to him given.
His restless soul hath burned with flames of hell.
And winged through ever blooming fields of heaven.
—Walter Malone.

Shakespeare.

Others abide our question. Thou art free.
We ask and ask. Then smilest and art still.
Outtopping knowledge. For the loftiest hill Who to the stars uncrowns his majesty, Planting his steadfast footsteps in the sea, Making the heaven of heavens his dwelling place.
Spares but the cloudy border of his base
To the foiled searching of mortality.
And thou, who didst the stars and sunbeams know, Self-schooled, self-scanned, self-honored, self-secure, Didst tread on earth unguessed at. Better set All pains the immortal spirit must endure.
All weakness which impairs, all griefs which lower.
Find their sole speech in that victorious brow.
—Matthew Arnold.
